A correspondent of the Daily Mail who witnessed the engagement off Port Arthur confirms this morning his previous accounts of the fight, and asserts again that one Japanese torpedo boat was sunk and another deserted by its crew in a sinking condition and probably captured by the Russians. He says also that the Japanese lost one battleship and had tached to it. Out Today.

Tokio, Sunday, Feb. 14 (delayed in transmission).—Goro Takahira, the Japanese minister at Washington, but officially advised his government that he is receiving numerous offers of large contributions to the war fund from Americans, and requests instructions as to the policy of the government in the matter. It is considered probable that Japan will refuse to accept this proffered aid, while stating that the government is deeply gratified at this and other expressions of American sympathy. The cabinet will consider the question and formally in struct Minister Takahira shortly.

Report Not Received.

A detailed report of his battle at Port Arthur has not been received from Vice Admiral Togo by the navy department, and the public is as yet without the full particulars of the engagement.

A letter from one of the men who participated in the naval fight says that the torpedo attack succeeded through a clever feint. The majority of the vessels comprising the torpedo flottila maneuvered in front of the Russian line and held its attention while the rest of the torpedo boats worked around to the rear and got close to the enemy's vessels before being discovered. They then fired their country's cause. A large body of troops is due in Nagasaki on Saturday to embark on transports for Korea. close to the enemy's vessels before being discovered. Although every moment of de-lay enables the Russians to become second the Russians to become better prepared for the conflict, the Japanese apparently are unconcerned and confident. They fully realize that the limited eapacity of the transfiberian railway, the distance of the Russians from their base of supplies, and the lack of communication by sea sets limitations on the proposed accomplishments of Russia in Manchuria and Siberia. There are now on board the French roulser Paschal 213 Russians, of whom two commanders, fourteen officers and thirty-one men are wounded. Six wounded men have already died. It is now known that the Russian cruiser Variag had forty men and one officer, a count, killed during the recent engagement officements absolute reticence is maintained by the government. An intense war feeling prevails among all classes, although there is an apparent absence of excitement. Among the striking features of the situation are the strict censorship which is exercised over all cablegrams, and the close concealment of military and naval movements.
